In a world completely fenced in, one young chicken dares to break away from tradition and out of the farmyard, yearning to explore the world he knows is just on the other side. Marco's heart aches to spread his wings and go where no chicken has gone before - and one day Marco gets his chance! But he discovers quickly that he's not ready for the big, bustling world outside the safe nest he's known his whole life. Luckily, his uncle is there to save him and prepare him to fulfill his destiny of becoming Marco Pollo, World-Traveling Chicken!

About the Author

Having studied French and Spanish but never having touched foreign soil, Kathryn Dickerson felt something was missing. She finally felt whole when she moved from the United States to Germany in her twenties. She then traveled to as many places as possible, her heart growing fuller with each adventure. Later, she became an educator of literature and world geography, teaching that the world was a wonderful place and that most humans are good and kind and welcoming. Kathryn, along with her husband, encouraged their children to explore. Together they traveled America, some of Europe, the United Kingdom, and Central and South America. She is happy when on an adventure, under the big skies of the world, meeting interesting people, learning different languages, eating new foods, and adopting the local customs and etiquette. However, Kathryn is truly fulfilled when she can share these experiences with others.

About the Illustrator

Okan Bülbül is a freelance illustrator living in Turkey with his wife and daughter. He has an engineering degree, but he left the field in order to pursue his love for art. Now, he is happily realizing his childhood dream of drawing pictures for a living. Okan illustrates for all age groups, but illustrations for children's books are his favorite.
