Waiting for Scotland S.A. Borders-Shoemaker

Waiting for Scotland is a poetry collection about reconciling the past with hopes for the future. Within these pages is the direct confrontation between youthful expectations and sobering realities. Born from the labors of deep soul work, it is all at once a comprehensive story and a series of meditations on identity. This collection acknowledges what has come before and how the past contends with a very real and powerful present. Borders-Shoemaker's words declare a hope for a different future, rooted in honesty and compassion.

About the Author

S.A. Borders-Shoemaker is an author, poet, and PhD in the Hampton Roads region of Virginia. Some influences on her writing include her work in conflict resolution and suicide prevention, as well as her extensive travels abroad. She has over fifteen publications in both national and international outlets, including Frankenstein & the Phoenix, Rooted in Time, The Conscious Objection, and numerous op-eds and anthology contributions. Waiting for Scotland is her second full-length poetry collection. She shares life with her husband, Tim, and their corgis, Edmund and Lillibette. Borders-Shoemaker is also an avid equestrian and can often be found riding her mustang, Rosa.
