REAL LIFE Janitor Turned Children's-Book-Author Reveals the Mysteries of What Happens in School After Hours

Now Available on iBooks and Kindle

Belle Isle Books, an imprint of Brandy Lane Publishers, Inc. of Richmond, Virginia is excited to announce publication of the electronic version of What Happens at School When You're Not There?, a children's title by Edward J. Denecke, now available on iBooks and Kindle. In this fun fantasy, the author—a beloved school janitor—brings to life a whimsical tale about what happens after classes end for the day. For nearly twenty years, Edward regaled the students at his school with wild stories about what happened after the final bell rang. Now, his long awaited story is available in electronic editions.

What Happens at School When You're Not There? is full of imagination. Bees unlock all of the doors; goldfish leave their tanks to have food fights, and the hallways and classrooms fill with birds, alligators, snakes, and more! The school custodians know about these nighttime visitors and clean up in the morning as if nothing happened. With colorful illustrations and crazy scenarios, this book is bound to capture any child's attention.

Edward J. Denecke was born in the Chicago area in 1953 and moved to Minneapolis, where he attended college and met his wife, Marilyn. They moved back to Illinois, where Edward became a pastor and had two children. In 1988, deciding he needed a change, Denecke became a school custodian and found it was his next calling. When he took a day job in 1994 working among the students, he began inventing stories to share with them. A mother asked him to write a children's book about what happened at school when the students went home and his imagination took flight. This book is the result.
