Lullaby

A Bedtime Story

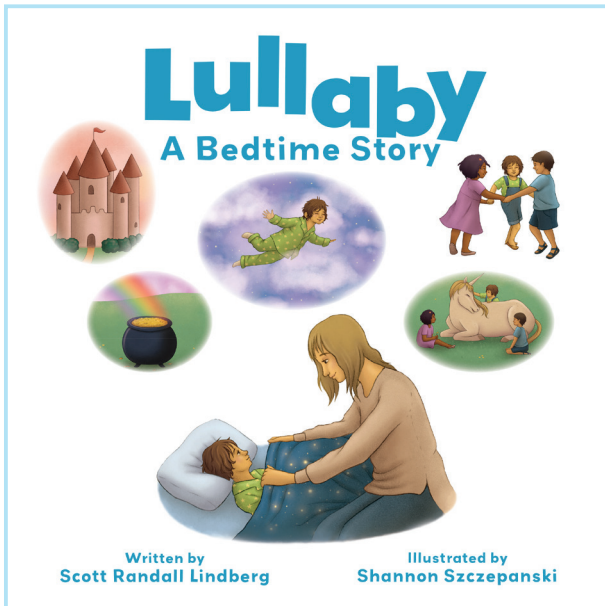

Written by
Scott Randall Lindberg

Illustrated by
Shannon Szczepanski

Do you remember what it was like to believe in miracles? A childlike imagination is full of hope and wonder and joyous laughter, where unicorns speak and children keep found gold at rainbow's end.

In this day and age of impersonal communication, this story will bring back the precious memories of the time when parents came into their child's room and read a book aloud, with eye-to-eye contact, gentle touch and a deep loving connection.

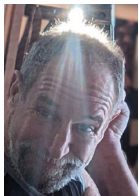

Lullaby: A Bedtime Story awakens the imagination for both child and parent and leaves plenty of wiggle room for heart-centered dialog, and perhaps will be so well cherished, that when the children grow up, they will read it to their own children.

About the Author

Scott Randall Lindberg is a passionate musician, songwriter and music teacher with a joyful heart, working with children from ages 3-73. He is also an author and storyteller whose popular soul-touching and hope-filled stories entertain and inspire readers worldwide. His first book, The Heart Speaks, was published in 2023.

Scott is a gifted artist and photographer with a talent for capturing multicolored flares and auras. He is a gemstone expert and artisan, crafting crystal necklaces which he conspires to give away daily.

Scott describes himself as a meandering musician, unreasonably silly, unrealistically positive . . . a starstruck storyteller, playful friend-makin' earth-shakin', cookie-bakin' mystic. A puddle-jumpin', heart-thumpin' giggling troubadour.

He is a woods-walkin', tree talkin', bubble blowin' childlike, friend findin' fun fiend who would gladly lose his mind to find his soul.

About the Illustrator

Shannon is a children's illustrator and graduate of Philadelphia's Moore College of Art & Design.

Through her work, she aims to capture the magic and whimsy of childhood.

She lives in New Jersey with her partner and their cat, Sylvie.
