THE PRESIDENTS DID WHAT NOW?

STORY BY WAG HARRISON ILLUSTRATIONS BY C. ROD UNALT

PRESIDENT MILLARD FILLMORE, your ghostly guide with impeccable timing and occasional self-awareness, invites you on a brand-new adventure. This time, we're leaving the Executive Mansion behind and stepping through enchanted doorways to the homes of America's most influential presidents.

Meet leaders who steered the nation through depression and war, fought for civil rights, built highways, conserved wilderness, and preserved the Union itself. You'll encounter soaring speeches, questionable decisions, moose encounters, taco offers, and more than a few awkward historical truths.

In The Presidents Did What Now?, Wag Harrison blends laugh-out-loud dialogue with thoughtful history, helping young readers understand that leadership is messy, democracy is complicated, and progress often comes wrapped in imperfection.

And as President Fillmore would remind you, your vote might just change the world.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Wag Harrison is an award-winning writer and educator. Holding graduate degrees in both history and educational leadership, Wag spent nearly twenty years as a teacher and school administrator before settling in as a full-time writer. A lifelong lover of learning and of telling tales from the past, Wag lives in Bon Air, Virginia, with his wife and three children.

ABOUT THE ILLUSTRATOR

Christina Rodriguez-Unalt, or "C. Rod. Unalt" is an award-winning illustrator who primarily works with acrylic and colored pencil, but starts her drawings on an iPad. Christina holds an MFA in Illustration and currently serves as the Head of a BFA Illustration program in New Jersey. When she's not illustrating, writing, or professor-ing, you can find her snuggled up on the couch with her family, and on movie night playing referee to her kids over the last kernel of popcorn.
